

The idea is always better

Sarah Huxley

The day

defeated, me.

The idea is always better than the incessant hum of banality.

The constant march towards profane, functionality.

Gasp yourself a rainbow.

Clasp onto that inflected supernova:

for it is cadence, perfumed as thought.

You, are not, alone.

Around the corner,

the tiger stares you in the eye,

hot with intention.

Emitting a fever of colour dust.

The idea - is -

Sacred and undefeated.

What if...

it is ours.

© 2020 Sarah Huxley

Bio

Sarah's values in life are focused on playfulness, curiosity and connection. She is a writer and speaker in many shapes and forms. Currently she is focusing on her PhD on non-formal learning and fun. During her in-between moments, apart from chasing after her mad dog, she imagines poetry.

@AidHoover

Favourite Poem

David Whyte - Everything Is Waiting For You